Roles & Responsibilities:

A startup incubator aims to work like an egg incubator- help a startup idea hatch into a marketable business plan. It helps a startup at early stage to incubate ideas, develop them, figure out the potential market, and capture early customers. Its purpose is to help startups grow and develop by providing office space, opportunities to network and some basic services like IT, Conference Rooms.

Their role of Incubation center at KYDSC Trust's IMS, Sakegaon-Bhusawal is to provide a support environment for startup and fledgling companies, thereby promoting local job creation, economic development, and technology transfer and The role of incubator organizations, those organizations where entrepreneur work before starting their own firms, is examined. Elements of the support environment typically include flexible rental space and leases, shared administrative services and equipment. It also includes access to a network of business and technical advisors capable of providing guidance and assistance in finance, business planning, marketing, legal consulting, manufacturing, etc. This raises the question, "by providing resources that reduce transaction costs have incubators helped the entrepreneurial process" Or on the other hand, by providing a community of practice have incubators merely facilitated shared meaning and learning among their tenants. Or, is it a combination of the two.
